PARROTTSVILLE - The City of Parrottsville, Tenn. recently launched its first website at www.parrottsvilletn.org. An accompanying Facebook and Twitter page has been launched.

The city, which touts itself as "Tennessee Third Oldest City", launched the website with a look that emphasizes its history and heritage.

Parrottsville Mayor Mary Keller said the site features a barn and rustic feel.

"We include our city services, facilities, leadership team, local businesses, churches, schedule of events, links, and contact information," she said. "We also have a section on the history of Parrottsville from the early days through 2011,"

Keller said the city has focused on bring high-speed internet into the city and she touted the city councils recent votes and efforts that could make internet more widely available.

"We want every home in Parrottsville to have access to high-speed internet," Keller said. "We want our citizens to be able to access our new website and to be able to conduct business without using slow dial-up.

The site was designed by Parrottsville resident Kevin Flint of KFPdesigns.com, llc.
